

Large herds of buffalo roamed the Great Plains of North America, providing meat and hides for the Indians. Emigrants found the buffalo easy to hunt and were glad to get fresh meat, often killing more animals than necessary. Where wood was scarce on the prairie, buffalo chips were used as fuel for cooking fires.

